What do you want to be when you grow up?

An engineer that makes life better through innovation and design

Madisen is a senior in high school and a compassionate and caring sister to her younger brother, Miles. When Miles was diagnosed with acute lymphoblastic leukemia, Madisen cuddled and played with him, but also drove him to the hospital for treatment. She also made time for herself, keeping up her grades and joining school extracurriculars, which gave her comfort during this time. Her advice for other siblings is to find the fun moments and hold on to them when times are tough.

“HAPPINESS SPRINGS FROM DOING GOOD AND HELPING OTHERS”

~ PLATO ~

There are tons of different ways to volunteer, but they all have something in common – they are all rewarding! Volunteering is a great way to learn about your community, make new friends and social connections, and know that you are helping others who need it. Volunteering also produces a positive response in your brain which boosts your mood and feeling of well-being. Plus it looks good on school and job applications, too!

While virtual volunteer opportunities are out there, if you choose to volunteer in-person please abide by the safety guidelines in place.

“Volunteering has not only allowed me to give back to a charity that has helped my family so much, but it has also given me the opportunity to earn service hours for school activities like National Honors Society. I’ve gotten my own friends involved with volunteering at many ALSF events too, and they loved it! I think it’s really important to take part in volunteer work and community service starting at a young age, so children and young adults acquire life skills and experience to benefit the community throughout their lives.”

— Maggie F., 17

Here are 5 suggestions to use your interests to make a difference!

- 1 For the animal lover: Contact a local animal shelter to ask if they need things like blankets, cleaning supplies, or even in-person volunteers. Many shelters have a wish list of items they frequently use. Make flyers and ask community members for donations.
- 2 For the chef: Gather dry goods to donate to a local food bank, or try serving a meal at a local food kitchen. Some food banks also need help sorting donations and packaging items together.
- 3 For the reader: Reach out to a local homeless shelter, hospital, or daycare to see if they accept book donations. Ask friends and family to donate gently used books. Local libraries or elementary schools may also have opportunities to read books aloud to small groups over a video call.
- 4 For the artist: Make cards to send to residents at a local nursing home, or to kids at a nearby hospital. Use your creative skills to brighten someone’s day with a positive message.
- 5 For the lemonade lover: Hold a virtual or socially distanced lemonade stand! You can join ALSF and fight childhood cancer one cup at a time by setting up a safe fundraiser online or in other creative ways. For tips and suggestions, visit AlexsLemonade.org/Get-Involved.
